

Marianne Engelman-Lado recently joined the Environmental Protection Agency as Deputy General Counsel of Environmental Initiatives, where she focuses on implementing the Administration's commitment to equity, environmental justice, and civil rights enforcement, and carrying out the agency's mission to protect public health and the environment. She previously directed an Environmental Justice Clinic at Vermont Law School and served as Lecturer at both the Yale University School of Public Health and the Yale School of the Environment. Before clinical teaching, she served as senior staff attorney at Earthjustice and as General Counsel at New York Lawyers for the Public Interest (NYLPI), a non-profit civil rights law firm. She began her legal career at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF). She recently served as co-chair of the Equity and Environmental Justice Working Group of Connecticut's Governor's Council on Climate Change. Marianne has lectured widely and taught graduate, law and undergraduate level courses. She holds a B.A. in government from Cornell University, a J.D. from the University of California at Berkeley, and an M.A. in Politics from Princeton University. Her most recent writing has focused on civil rights enforcement in the environmental justice context.